Council passes resolution on parking proposal

Parking was a hot topic at the May 3 Administrative Staff Council meeting with many of the council members saying no other issue has sparked as much feedback from their constituents.

The discussion was prompted by a parking survey distributed in March by parking and traffic inquiring whether University employees would be willing to pay for parking spaces and included other questions about reserved parking. The survey had a 46 percent response rate with 344 faculty replies, 366 classified staff replies and 155 administrative staff replies.

According to the survey, if a policy was enacted whereby employees could personally purchase a reserved parking spot, 27 percent of the classified staff said they would be interested with a suggested average cost of $31 per year; 28 percent of the faculty indicated interest at a suggested average cost of $35 per year and 32 percent of the administrative staff would be interested at an average cost of $25 per year.

When asked if University administrators should be given free reserved spaces, 78 percent of the classified staff said no; 69 percent of faculty said no; and 50 percent of the administrative staff said no.

"The survey's overwhelming sentiment is that people don't want to pay for parking or ride the bus," said council member Deborah McLaughlin, who reported on the survey's results.

Jill Carr, chair of ASC, also distributed to the council a revised parking plan sent to the chairs of the University's constituency groups in March by Robert Martin, vice president for operations. It inquires if $30 parking decals were available for perimeter parking lots: 1) Would staff be willing to pay $100-$200 per year for a specific reserved parking location in center campus lots?; 2) Would staff be willing to pay $50-$75 to park in the center campus lots on a space available basis?; or if the University paid as a benefit the first $30, would staff be interested in 1) or 2)?

Carr said she and ASC's Executive Committee met with Martin to discuss the matter. Under a new parking plan starting in the fall, all freshmen will be required to park their vehicles in Lot 6, near the stadium and use the shuttle to go back and forth to campus. Carr said she inquired why this plan wouldn't free more spaces on campus for University staff to use.

"Basically the reason for an increase in cost (for parking) is not because we need additional space but to fund another shuttle bus," Carr said. "This is a funding issue."

Many council members said their constituents felt the proposed plans were "income discriminatory," with staff who earn higher salaries being able to afford reserved parking while employees with lower salaries could not. Others said it would be difficult to patrol reserved parking and there would be a high likelihood of students and campus visitors mistakenly parking in these spots.

Other council members said using the shuttle sometimes can be inconvenient. If a person misses the bus, it takes 20 minutes for it to come around again to that location, they said.

One council member said he thought it was ironic that parking and traffic does not have any funds of its own to purchase another shuttle. "Didn't the funding for the Visitor Information Center come from parking and

Paul F. Kaple, a sophomore medical technology major, is the recipient of the $1,000 Administrative Staff Scholarship. It was presented to him recently by Jill Carr (left), chair of Administrative Staff Council, and Laura Emch, chair of ASC's Scholarship Committee. Kaple is a member of the Golden Key national honor society and the Alpha Lambda Delta national scholarship society. He also was named the College of Health and Human Services Student of the Year in 1987-88.

Six faculty honored for teaching

Undergraduate Student Government has awarded its annual Faculty Excellence Awards to six University faculty, one from each undergraduate college. The awards, which are based upon student evaluations and are among the highest honors given to faculty, were presented to Keith Dearborn, musical arts; John Erion, interim chair of the technology systems program; and Dr. John Holmes, marketing.

The other recipients are Dr. Steven Lab, criminal justice; Dr. Robert Mazur, art; and Dr. Peterann Siehl, educational foundations and inquiry.

Dearborn earned his bachelor's and master's degrees from Hillsdale and Westminster Choir colleges, respectively, and joined the University staff in 1971. He has taught at more than 125 conferences and workshops throughout the eastern U.S. and has performed in choral and opera performances throughout the country.

He is the past-president and current vice president of the Midwest Kodaly Music Educators of America.

After teaching at Ferris State College and Michigan Technological University, Erion joined the Bowling Green staff in 1986. While at Ferris State, he led the development of the construction management and facilities management programs at the college.

He is the author of three books and numerous journal articles. His research interests include construction methodologies and computer applications.

Holmes, who has taught at the University since 1965, has written more than three dozen articles for professional and academic journals. He is the past president of both the Advertising Club of Toledo and the northwest Ohio chapter of the American Marketing Association, and is a member of the Academy of Marketing Science, the American Academy of Advertising and the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication.

It's estimated that during his career at Bowling Green, Holmes has taught advertising and marketing to more than 5,000 students; he is also the adviser to the student Advertising Club and is the past adviser of the Marketing Club.

Lab, who earned his master's and doctoral degrees in criminology from Florida State University, joined the University faculty in 1987. Active in student advising, Lab is also the faculty adviser to the student Criminal Justice Organization and Alpha Phi Sigma national criminal justice honor society.

The author of two books and numerous journal articles, he is a member of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences, the

USG presents Moore awards

Dr. Lee Meserve, Melissa Dallas Bandy and Linda Popovich are this year's recipients of the Hollis A. Moore Awards presented annually by Undergraduate Student Government.

Established in 1981, the Moore awards are presented annually to the faculty member, administrator and student who have contributed "outstanding service to the welfare of the entire University community."

The award is named after the University's seventh president, who held the post from 1970 until his death in 1981.

Meserve, who joined the University in 1973 was named a full professor of biology in 1988. Active in University governance, he has served on a number of committees on the department, college and University level; most recently, he was named to head the University's United Way fund drive this coming fall.

Last year, he was appointed to a three-year-term as editor of The Ohio Journal of Science, the official publication of the Ohio Academy of Science.

The author of numerous journal articles, Meserve is also a member of the American

New representatives are elected to council

Classified employees have elected new representatives to Classified Staff Council with terms beginning in June.

Jim Lein, chair of the Elections Committee, said approximately 20 percent of the classified staff voted in the May 3 election. New council members are: Nancy White Lee, popular culture, and Ann Ruehl, libraries and learning resources, representing the academic affairs area; Bob Kreienkamp, WBGU-TV, representing University relations; Marilyn Gottschalk, University Union, and Meagon Shaffer, food operations, representing auxiliary support services; Kenneth Stemen, plumbing, and Kathy Eninger, paint shop, representing plant operations and maintenance; and Carol Lininger, computer services, representing planning and budgeting.

Construction scheduled

Summer months mean it's time for construction projects on campus.

One of those projects include Alumni Drive which is currently under construction through July 15. The area will include both sides of the boulevard section of Alumni Drive from Wooster, past the Visitors Information Center to Mercer Road.

The roadway will be partially open a majority of the time, but may require short periods of complete closure. The Visitors Information Center will remain open, with some minor traffic re-routing as may become necessary.

The project, which is the final phase of the campus entrance improvement project, entails new roadway resurfacing, new concrete curbing along the boulevard section and rework of site drainage. Cost of the project is estimated at $110,000.

Office remains open

In order to provide expanded coverage, personnel services will remain open during the lunch hour and on Friday afternoons during the summer months with limited staffing.

Watch your weight

The next Weight Watchers Program will be offered starting June 7 and will run through July 12. Each session will be from noon to 12:30 p.m. in the conference room of Jerome Library.

If interested, contact Ruth Milliron or Karol Heckman in personnel services at 372-2225.

traffic's reserve monies? Now that they need money for an actual parking need, they have to have us fund it," he said.

Ken Kavanagh, a member of ASC and the Parking Committee, said the committee members were concerned because the proposals were never submitted to them for their consideration.

In response to the proposals, ASC unanimously passed a resolution saying it is "vehemently" opposed to the proposals made in the March 19 memo from Martin. The council also recommended that the issues be referred to the Parking Committee for short-term and long-term planning and recommendations, and that the various constituent groups be allowed to offer recommendations and input during this process.
